The most recent trends in areas such as novel storage materials, advanced storage concepts and configurations, thermal energy storage for renewable energy systems, and thermal energy storage in buildings.

Theoretical, numerical and experimental approaches will be presented for the entire range of applications, from material characterization to complete storage systems.

This conference provides a forum for discussion among academics, researchers, and professionals who work in the field of thermal energy storage. We encourage you to come to Lleida to present and discuss the latest findings from research and development carried out in our field.
